ENVIRONMENT VS. HEREDITY

Environment is everything in the mental growth of a child and heredity next to nothing, according to L. F. Smith, in the book "The Education Association." The book is a subscription book publishers. Heredity may almost be disregarded unless it is expressed in environment, said Mr. Smith.

The only actualities our forebears can leave us that amount to anything are health and money," said Mr. Smith. "As to heredity, I am convinced that the only way our ancestors can hand it down so that we can be sure of it is in the form of a good education. The mental advantages of a child of intelligent parents is that is brought up in an intelligent atmosphere among good books. This is the kind of heredity that is not passed on and the only kind that means anything."

"The home library is the best badge of good ancestry. The subscription book salesman, carrying knowledge through the country has had more effect than any other factor in heredity by supplying the mental food on which children could grow up appreciating knowledge. There are 40,000,000 people in this country out of easy reach of libraries or book stores, according to the report of the National Education Association. One of these homes would be accused of heredity inferiority if book salesman did not reach them. Heredity is a theory. Environment is a fact."

Regarding Our Presidents

Editor Oxford County Advertiser: Truly this is the age of discovery. The last and in many ways a very wonderful one is that of Mr. D. Cronet Clarke, who, according to the reasonable interpretation of his article in your issue of March 20th, has discovered that George Washington was a political grifter and Theodore Roosevelt a moral coward. Great marks of Mr. Clarke, who have surely hit the bumble bee that wasn't there. To be sure, Mr. Clarke has placed him one rung higher on the ladder of fame than Mr. Seitz. It is quite possible that the common citizen like myself who has not acquired the habit of gazing until he becomes dizzy, at small things under the microscope, even until he has lost his sense of proportion, may still continue to have faith that George Washington was one of the really and truly great.

Mr. Clarke says: "I was amused at Mr. Cummings' remarks about Roosevelt." I am grateful to know that I amused someone. Mr. Clarke's chief grievance seems to be that Roosevelt did not pitch in to revise the tariff. Mr. Clarke, have you not yet discovered that that same tariff was the thing that wily politicians dangled before the eyes of the public to give them something to talk about as they would not trouble more serious questions, and that the trouble with Mr. Taft's revision of said tariff "downward" was that that administration gave it down and one down? What did the attempted turning over of the coal lands to the Morgan Guggenheim crowd, the blundering Canadian Reciprocity measure. These being the general trend of the administration, I am sure it was not by almost universal consent.

Your statement that he (Roosevelt) was never willing to do even a legal thing in a legal way if he could discover a law-breaking way to perform it is too absurd to need refutation.

Could you have really found some of those alleged illegal acts in the days of Boss Barnes and others that sometimes brought legal action against Roosevelt, and utterly failed, your everlasting fortune would have been secure.

In regard to your correcting my statement of facts concerning the meeting of Hughes and Hiram Johnson, I did not say they met or that either snubbed the other. My understanding, and I will say it was from a statement from a republican from California, was that the managers of the campaign decided that Mr. Hughes should not meet Mr. Johnson, although they stopped at the same hotel. It seems that your information was derived from campaign blarney before election. I will say that mine was from a candid statement of a California republican after election.

I wish to say to Brother Whitman that I was and always have been sorry that California did not go for Hughes and the Old Bourbon Machine. For in a case like that I always consider it the first duty of every good American citizen to choose the least of two evils.

Yours truly,

R. L. Cummings.

THE JEWISH PASSOVER

Feast in Pilgrim Festivals Cycle Began Wednesday Night

The Jewish Passover began Wednesday night at sunset and is ushered in with an elaborate home ceremony called the Seder. The festival is one of a cycle known as the Pilgrim Festivals, on which all males in ancient times were in duty bound to make a pilgrimage.

According to the Bible the passover is to be kept for seven days, but orthodox Jews in the lands of the diaspora observe it for eight days. The Palestine Jew strictly obeys the ancient ordinance. At first the Passover had an agricultural significance and marked the beginning of the harvest season. Now it is primarily the great Festival of Freedom, commemorating the casting off of the Egyptian bonds of slavery and the exodus to the Promised Land. The story of the liberation is told in detail at the Seder service. A special feast is served in which the family and friends participate, since it is an ancient Jewish tradition that none shall suffer want on this night. At the beginning of the ceremony the youngest son asks four traditional questions relative to the mode of observance. The rest of the "Haggadah" or ritual is practically an answer to these four questions.

The ritual is filled with quaint and fanciful anecdotes.

SHIP OF FATE

Here upon life's turbulent ocean
Tides of mortal passion flow,
While upon its heaving bosom
Ships of fate sail to and fro.
Some are bound upon a journey
Far across the foamy brine;
Some are drifting just for pleasure,
Others, anchored, lay at rest.
Some are freighted with treasures,
Bound for realms where the sun
Others weighed down with sorrow,
Striking near the rocky shore.
Still the ship of human progress
Flows a furrow deep and wide,
While the craft of earthly content
Rides in triumph off the tide.
Will they tarry till the sails for safety
Wave their tattered flags in air?
Can they hold the ship at anchor
When the dangerous eddies are near?
Let us shun the shallow waters
O'er the hidden reefs of sin
And keep safely in the channel
Where the deeper currents flow.
And no shipwreck will befall us
While our hands guide our way
Through the dangers of the sea.
Shattered life boats sweep away.
Let us choose that tarry no longer
When the same dark way lies,
We will keep our ship from founder,
Where the shoals of sorrow lay.
We can trust this dauntless courage,
He will guide us safely on
Through the darkest hours of midnight
To the harbor and the dawn.

First Quits—Then Ends A Cough

That terrible "hack," "hack," "hack," that almost drives you frantic, that strains your body and can be quieted in a jiffy by taking a swallow now and then of that fine old medicine, KEMP'S BALSAM. It cuts the phlegm, soothes the inflamed membrane, and gives you the constant desire to cough, cough, cough. Only 30 cents at all stores.

And the above story is all true says a former Californian, now a booster for Maine and a resident of Norway.

LET'S WORK TOGETHER

If this article were headed "cooperation," the reader might glance at the heading and pass it on, because "cooperation" is an overworked word. With it we might as well—like the Arab—fold our tents and silently steal away, so far as getting things done for Maine. Cooperations has built nations and kept governments going. No battle was ever won without it. No home can hold families together without it. No store or business institution can thrive in its absence. No church can expect to grow without it. The question is, why can we not apply this principle of working together for the general welfare and civic advancement of Boston? The answer is, we can't.

Maine has had many things to be proud of in its past. Let us build upon a solid foundation for the future. We certainly must have worked together in the past. Our churches, schools, civic and other organizations are living monuments to the fact that we and those who came before us knew the mighty potency of cooperation. What we want now is more of it. Let us not say the time is not ripe. The time always is right to do the best, to work in harmony, to cooperate.

The State of Maine made up of the different towns and cities, are cooperating in the act of setting forth the advantages, the natural beauty and great summer opportunities of the State, to the people outside of Maine, as one of the best places to tour and spend a summer vacation among the pine clad hills or beside the sparkling lakes with the many interesting auto trips near at hand. This "Advertising Maine" is being done by the people of the entire state and this cooperation of the individuals as well as the organizations throughout the state, is what is going to bring results. It's effect is sure to be felt by everyone.

A instance of this individual advertising Maine was recently brought to view at St. Petersburg, Florida, when a group of Maine people presented in the pageant, a float, representing "The Line of a Maine Summer." The float contained two canoes, and canoeists surrounded by flowers representing water lilies and the background of sturdy pines, very attractively arranged. There were over 100 floats viewed by over 100,000 winter tourists and the Maine float won the prize. This does some good advertising for Maine, it surely did and the reports of the affair from the Sunny South continue to advertise and prove the fact that Maine people are back of the publicity campaign now in progress. The towns and cities are also working along the same line and Maine is going to be presented to the world in a true, wholehearted way so that people can know its beauties, its attractions and its varied industrial advantages.
